

The Riveting Story of a Young Man's Struggle to Free Himself From Porn Values and Sexual Addiction

Jack Derritt doesn't realize he's running away from his troubles when he builds a shack in the Ozark mountain backwoods.

But even in the forest, he can't escape the unpleasant truth: he feels like a kid, not a man, he hasn't found his ideal woman, and when he tries to daydream about her, his head fills with pornographic images he despises.

When a magical mentor appears at his shack, Jack begins to explore the causes of his problems. With his mentor's help, he solves the riddle that has kept him from truly understanding people of all kinds—and finds the love of his life and the healthy relationship he's always wanted.

You will discover how Jack:

- ✓ Learns to accept and enjoy people who are different from him,
- ✓ Forgives his parents—and opens the hidden door to love,
- ✓ Turns despair into hope and confidence,
- ✓ Changes himself from a “kid” into a man.

The novel that unlocks invisible behavior patterns you must understand to solve personal troubles and identify problem people. Buy it now!

A heartfelt and richly rewarding story that will leave you breathless with its insights into personal growth and happiness.

“Saying No's strength lies in its warmth and in its insistence that people's limitations don't cancel out their goodness.”

—Ellen Hawley
Author of Trip Sheets and Open Line

“It is a work of art—well-written, rich in detail, emotionally charged, with characters that come to life on the page.”

— Robert Bly

Saying No To Naked Women

David R. Yale

Saying No To Naked Women

A novel

David R. Yale

How one man freed himself from porn values and sexual addiction